WTC Towers: The Case For Controlled Demolition
By Herman Schoenfeld

In this article we show that "top-down" controlled demolition accurately accounts for the collapse times of the World Trade Center towers. A top-down controlled demolition can be simply characterized as a "pancake collapse" of a building missing its support columns. This demolition profile requires that the support columns holding a floor be destroyed just before that floor is collided with by the upper falling masses. The net effect is a pancake-style collapse at near free fall speed.

This model predicts a WTC 1 collapse time of 11.38 seconds, and a WTC 2 collapse time of 9.48 seconds. Those times accurately match the seismographic data of those events.1 Refer to equations (1.9) and (1.10) for details.

It should be noted that this model differs massively from a "natural pancake collapse" in that the geometrical composition of the structure is not considered (as it is physically destroyed). A natural pancake collapse features a diminishing velocity rapidly approaching rest due to the resistance offered by the columns and surrounding "steel mesh".

DEMOLITION MODEL

A top-down controlled demolition of a building is considered as follows

1. An initial block of j floors commences to free fall.

2. The floor below the collapsing block has its support structures disabled just prior the collision with the block.

3. The collapsing block merges with the momentarily levitating floor, increases in mass, decreases in velocity (but preserves momentum), and continues to free fall.

4. If not at ground floor, goto step 2.

Let j be the number of floors in the initial set of collapsing floors.
Let N be the number of remaining floors to collapse.
Let h be the average floor height.
Let g be the gravitational field strength at ground-level.
Let T be the total collapse time.

Using the elementary motion equation distance = (initial velocity) * time + 1/2 * acceleration * time^2

We solve for the time taken by the k'th floor to free fall the height of one floor

[1.1] t_k=(-u_k+(u_k^2+2gh))/g where u_k is the initial velocity of the k'th collapsing floor.

The total collapse time is the sum of the N individual free fall times

[1.2] T = sum(k=0)^N (-u_k+(u_k^2+2gh))/g

Now the mass of the k'th floor at the point of collapse is the mass of itself (m) plus the mass of all the floors collapsed before it (k-1)m plus the mass on the initial collapsing block jm.

[1.3] m_k=m+(k-1)m+jm =(j+k)m

If we let u_k denote the initial velocity of the k'th collapsing floor, the final velocity reached by that floor prior to collision with its below floor is

[1.4] v_k=SQRT(u_k^2+2gh)

which follows from the elementary equation of motion

(final velocity)^2 = (initial velocity)^2 + 2 * (acceleration) * (distance)

Conservation of momentum demands that the initial momentum of the k'th floor equal the final momemtum of the (k-1)'th floor.

[1.5] m_k u_k = m_(k-1) v_(k-1)

Substituting (1.3) and (1.4) into (1.5)
[1.6] (j + k)m u_k= (j + k - 1)m SQRT(u_(k-1)^2+ 2gh)

Solving for the initial velocity u_k

[1.7] u_k=(j + k - 1)/(j + k) SQRT(u_(k-1)^2+2gh)

Which is a recurrence equation with base value

[1.8] u_0=0

The WTC towers were 417 meters tall and had 110 floors. Tower 1 began collapsing on the 93rd floor. Making substitutions N=93, j=17 , g=9.8 into (1.2) and (1.7) gives

[1.9] WTC 1 Collapse Time = sum(k=0)^93 (-u_k+(u_k^2+74.28))/9.8 = 11.38 sec where u_k=(16+ k)/(17+ k) SQRT(u_(k-1)^2+74.28) ;/ u_0=0

Tower 2 began collapsing on the 77th floor. Making substitutions N=77, j=33 , g=9.8 into (1.2) and (1.7) gives

[1.10] WTC 2 Collapse Time =sum(k=0)^77 (-u_k+(u_k^2+74.28))/9.8 = 9.48 sec
Where
u_k=(32+k)/(33+k) SQRT(u_(k-1)^2+74.28) ;/ u_0=0

This function calculates the total time for a top-down demolition.
Parameters:
_H - the total height of building
_N - the number of floors in building
_J - the floor number which initiated the top-down cascade (the 0'th floor being the ground floor)

> cascadeTime :: Double -> Double -> Double -> Double > cascadeTime _H _N _J = sum [ (- (u k) + sqrt( (u k)^2 + 2*g*h))/g | k<-[0..n]]

From Radio Inc 08 conference
The dust has settled. In 1998, when Radio Ink </goout.asp?u=http://www.radioink.com>launched its first Internet conference, dotcoms were booming, streaming was new, and stations were trying to determine their course of action with the new Internet technology Today we're living in a changed world. The speed of change has made some industries obsolete in a moment's time. The promises of the Internet have come true, but not exactly as predicted. Its impact is bigger and faster than anyone anticipated.
Radio faces new opportunity as well as new competition. Every cell phone in the world is a portable media device that places media content in the hands of every person worldwide; a video clip can be created with a cell phone and viewed by millions within moments. Meanwhile, traditional media outlets are shrinking; big advertisers like P&G and Ford are reducing traditional media budgets and placing the money into search and social networking. Though the doomsayers always predict gloom when new media alternatives are launched, this time they might be right.
Radio's future is no longer about transmitters alone. Wifi radio devices </goout.asp?u=http://www.ccrane.com/radios/internet-radios/acoustic-energy-wi-fi-internet-radio.aspx>offer consumers unlimited choices of thousands of stations created by non-professionals who have something to say -- and people will listen. Radio stations custom designed for mobile audiences have been launched. Sprint </goout.asp?u=http://www2.sprint.com/mr/news_dtl.do?id=13240>currently offers the service to 50 million customers. This is the tip of the iceberg with dozens of potential and viable competitors to radio. Advertising Age predicts the end </goout.asp?u=http://adage.com/article?article_id=115712> of the 30-second commercial. Some say that all commercials will be replaced by self-selection of consumers.
Radio reinvented, the theme of this year's conference, will brief you on every challenge and new technology, will show you what's possible that your station can adopt to increase revenues, to allow you to retain and engage audiences, and it will let you know how to prepare your people for this rapidly changing environment. We'll bring in the experts from outside of radio, the people representing new technologies and the people doing new and interesting things few people have heard about.
Like our Internet conference's of the past this conference will open your eyes, shift your thinking, put you out of your comfort zone' and if you are proactive, it might change your world overnight.
If you're clinging to the past and think radio won't change, if you think things will revert back to normal, if you think radio cannot loose audience to these new competitors' don't bother to attend. You're probably right. If on the other hand you know a tsunami of change will impact your career and you want to know what's coming, how you can adapt and want specific ideas you can implement to be ahead of the curve. We would love to have you.

Right!

It was a man-made, top-down demolition. It started from the top and a Islamist pilot of a hijacked 757/767 caused it.

In this video, Jowenko, a demolition expert, eplains wht WTC1 and 2
WERE NOT caused by demolition explosives:

I see changes on the horizon for radio, while many like you and in the industry and in denial. Free over air TV is still alive but many viewers no longer rely on a stick on their roof to receive programming. Free radio will live on.. but how we receive content will change! In a time when talent is being scaled down in favor of voice tracking is a huge mistake.

It's an exciting time for radio, but the industry must invest in it's future and groom new talent for the challenges ahead. If the industry refuses to invest in it's future, choosing short term profits the industry will be doomed, The trends are alarming! Total listeners are trending down, but slowly thankfully! Revenues that keeps radio free over air have been flat for a few years.. And for the past year have been trending down! Google & the internet are changing everything faster than anyone could have predicted. Point and click gives advertisers reach and measurable accountability. The industries biggest category auto, has been shifting more dollars to the internet instead of radio.
because they've lost confidence is radio to deliver results. Mass media is dying.. including radio & TV..

1076. ANOTHER BIG HD-AM PLUS: IT COULD BLOW UP YOUR TRANSMITTER!

Obnoxious, fatiguing artifact-laden codec. High costs. Self-interference and analog noise. Adjacent-channel interference. Encoding delay. Limited digital coverage. Necessitates drastically reduced analog bandwidth. Won't work with a large percentage of existing directional arrays. Engineers hate it; listeners couldn't care less.

To these well-known HD-AM features we can now add: IBOC-AM can damage power modules in the latest generation Harris 50kw transmitter, the 3DX-50.

There have now surfaced an increasing number of accounts - of course, in typical HD fashion, being forcibly hushed by IBOC powers-that-be - that the HD encoding and COFDM system can cause transient drive failure to MOSFETS in the PA modules of the popular high-power Harris AM transmitter being used by a large number of HD-equipped stations. Result: PAs shut down, forcing reduced-power operation until an engineer can make repairs.

There is at least one account of a 50kw midwest station that operates its older-generation transmitter - that's right, a BACKUP - because it's less susceptible to PA damage from HD encoding. Which of course means that the shiny new 3DX-50 is relegated to the status of being an expensive standby TX!

An unnamed source in the tech-support department at Broadcast Electronics stated that he was truly thankful for HD Radio. Without HD, the number of employees required to deal with technical problems and issues would likely be halved.

I'd sure love to read the technical reports about exactly how the damage occurred. I am assuming that maintaining flat phase in a transmitter array over 50 kHz of spectrum would be difficult. But with the digital sidebands only operating at 500 W, I'm a little curious about how any realistic SWR mismatch at the extremes of the bandwidth could return any more than a few watts back into the MOSFETs.

If this can be documented, we should hear a lot more about it if they boost the sideband power on AM! This could really turn the tide against a return of investment on IBOC. I am wondering if it is the reason why analog coverage is also lost, engineers are quietly reducing the transmitter power just so they don't blow output stages

No. It was the Romulans. Using holgraphically enhanced disruptors to do the initial damage to the buildings, then they used their special tractor beam to shove the towers down. WTC7 was a "lucky hit".

Or, it was the two planes that flew into them, and the fires that came as a result.

I've survived 18 years of radio. Went through consolidation years too. Buddy hold onto your shorts because change is coming to radio, again! The industry will find ways to survive what's on the horizon as long as ownership can still make money selling ads you'll have free over the air radio. If you enjoy 10 or more commercials back to back and same old same old programming more power to you man. I urge you to shop their advertisers and tell retailers you heard their ads on the radio. And when Arbitron comes knocking agree to participate in their radio surveys for $2.00. You can't just listen. If you do the above you'll save radio. Frankly, most people just don't care. Survey response has also been trending down, because people don't have time.

Arbitron survey response trending down.

Revenues flat and trending down.

listenership trending down.

Sales of Iboc receivers "radio's future" DOA compared to sales Ipods and other gadgets.

Ah, no surprise there. Seemed questionable from the outset, especially given the lack of any elaboration on the DSP capabilities in the product literature. Another minus, of course, is the absence of synchronous detection.

Retro styling, a decently-sized speaker and a rotatable MW antenna count for something; but the $300 price tag still doesn't seem quite justified.

SIMPLE PHYSICS EXPOSES THE BIG 9/11 LIE - GOVERNMENT BUILDING COLLAPSE
EXPLANATION FAILS REALITY CHECK

On September 11, 2001, the world watched in horror as the World Trade Center (WTC) Twin Towers collapsed, killing thousands of innocent people. Videos of the collapses were replayed ad nauseam on TV for days. About 5 hours after the towers fell, WTC building 7 also collapsed suddenly, completely, and straight down at near free-fall speed. This steel-framed building was not touched by the planes that struck the towers, and had sustained relatively minor debris damage and small fires. Nearby buildings far more heavily damaged remained standing.

In June 2005, in an apparent response to an article by Morgan Reynolds, former CIA Director and current Secretary of Defense Robert Gates stated, "The American people know what they saw with their own eyes on September 11, 2001. To suggest any kind of government conspiracy in the events of that day goes beyond the pale."

We will prove here, with scientific rigor, that it's the government's tale that's "beyond the pale"!

Did most of the American people really understand the unprecedented phenomena they had witnessed? Could a lack of knowledge of physics, and the emotional shock of this mass-murderous "terrorist attack" have stymied objective thinking and led to the blind acceptance of authoritarian assertions?

The government and the media TOLD US what we saw. The government told us that we had witnessed a "gravitational" collapse; what is now referred to as a "pancake collapse". According to the government claims, the plane crashes and subsequent kerosene (like lamp oil - jet fuel is NOT exotic) fires heated the UL-certified structural steel to the point where it was significantly weakened, which is very difficult to believe, never mind repeat in an experiment. Even with massive fires that incinerate everything else, the steel frames of such buildings generally remain standing. According to the "pancake theory", this purported (all physical evidence was quickly and illegally destroyed) weakening supposedly caused part of the tower to collapse downward onto the rest of the tower, which, we've been repeatedly told, somehow resulted in a chain reaction of the lower floors sequentially, one at a time, yielding to the weight falling from above.

There are some problems with that theory - it does not fit the observed facts:

* It cannot account for the total failure of the immense vertical steel core columns - as if they were there one moment and gone the next.

* The collapse times were near free-fall, far too rapid to be due to gravity alone. This article focuses on the latter of these two discrepancies.

Those that concocted the "pancake theory" made a fatal error - they didn't check their story against the inviolate laws of physics! This is easy to do, even without any physical evidence to examine. We can test that incredible pancake tale using basic high-school physics. Let's do that - use a simple, unassailable, incontrovertible conservation-of-energy analysis to perform a reality check that establishes once and for all that the government, and such government story backers as PBS, Popular Mechanics, and Scientific American have falsified the true nature of the 9/11 disaster.

How Gravity Acts:

Sir Isaac Newton noticed that apples fell from trees. Others had also noticed this, but none had ever devised a theory of gravity from the observation. Over the years, mankind has learned that the force of gravity at and near Earth's surface produces an acceleration of known constant magnitude. That doesn't mean we know HOW it works, or WHY, but we have become able to predict its effects with a high degree of precision and certainty - gravity has always had the same, predictable, effect.

Galileo Galilei used the leaning tower of Pisa to demonstrate that a large ball and a small one (of lesser mass) fell (accelerated downward) at the same rate. Prior to Galileo, people had just assumed that heavier objects fall faster, much the way they had assumed the Earth was flat.

So while an object of greater mass will exert more force (its weight) upon anything supporting it against gravity's pull, it does not experience any greater acceleration when gravity's pull is not opposed - when it is falling. Earth's gravity at and near the surface of the planet can only accelerate objects downward at one known, constant rate: 32 feet per second for each second of free fall. As Galileo demonstrated centuries ago, heavier objects are not accelerated any quicker than are lighter objects.

So Earth's gravity produces a downward acceleration of 32 feet per second per second. This means that an object, after falling one second, will be falling at a speed of 32 ft/sec. After the 2nd second, it will be falling at 64 ft/sec. After the 3rd second, it will be falling at 96 ft/sec., and so on.

Further, since gravity's acceleration is constant, and an object is falling at 32 ft/sec after one second has elapsed, we know that it has averaged 16 ft/sec for the entire distance. Thus after one second, the object has fallen 16 feet.

Scientists have derived simple free-fall equations that can be used to harness this knowledge mathematically. These equations can be found in any high-school physics book:

* Falling velocity = acceleration of gravity x time. (V = G x T)

And

* Distance fallen = 1/2 x acceleration of gravity x time squared. (D = 1/2 x G x T x T)

So if we want to know how far an object has free-fallen after 3 seconds:

Distance = 1/2 x 32 x 9 = 144 feet

So after 3 seconds in Earth's gravity, an object will have fallen 144 feet and will be falling at 96 ft/sec.

Checking Our Work:

We've just solved a simple physics problem. Now let's check our work, using conservation of energy.

We know that energy can neither be created nor destroyed - it merely changes form. If we take the potential (in this case chemical, molecular) energy in a barrel of oil and burn it, it changes to heat energy. When we burn gasoline in our car's engine, we get kinetic (motional) energy, plus some heat, as an engine is not 100% efficient. When we use our car's brakes to bleed off some of that kinetic energy (slow down), that energy is converted into heat (the brakes get hot). Explosives convert potential energy [molecular or atomic] to kinetic energy (explosive force) quickly enough to shatter or even pulverize concrete.

In the case of the free-falling object, the two kinds of energy we are concerned with are kinetic energy and potential energy. Examples of potential (gravitational) energy are the energy available from water stored up high in a water tower, or a boulder perched atop a hill. If whatever is holding it up there is removed, it will fall under the influence of gravity's pull. As it accelerates downward, the potential energy is converted to the kinetic energy of the object's motion.

So, as an object falls, it changes its potential energy into kinetic energy.

The equation for potential energy is:

* Potential Energy = Mass (or weight) x Gravity x Height. (PE = M x G x H)

The equation for kinetic energy is:

* Kinetic Energy = 1/2 x Mass x Velocity squared. (KE = 1/2 x M x V x V)

So let's just say, for the sake of simplicity, that our falling object has a mass of 1. (Remember, the object's mass will affect its energy, and its momentum, but not its rate of free-fall.)

The potential energy given up by falling 3 seconds (144 ft) is: 1 x 32 x 144 = 4608

The kinetic energy gained after falling 3 secs is 1/2 x 1 x 96 squared = 1/2 x 9216 = 4608

So, the available potential energy was converted into kinetic energy. Seeing that energy was, in fact, conserved is how we know that the answer in the simple case above was correct. We've checked our work, using an independent analysis, based upon the sound physical principle of conservation of energy. Now, and only now, we can be certain that our answer was correct.

One Little Complication - the effect of air resistance:

The free-fall equations above reflect a perfect, frictionless world. They perfectly predict the behavior of falling bodies in a vacuum. In fact, you may have seen a science class demonstration in which the air is pumped out of a tube and then a feather will fall, in that vacuum, just as fast as will a solid metal ball.

That's how parachutes work: much of the falling object's potential energy gets expended doing the work of pushing a lot of air out of the way in order for the object to fall. As a result, not all of the gravitational potential energy can go towards accelerating the object downward at gravity's rate of 32 ft/sec/sec.

In other words, only when there is zero frictional resistance can any falling object's potential energy be completely converted into kinetic energy. Anything that resists a falling object's downward velocity reduces its acceleration from the maximum gravitational acceleration of 32 feet per second per second, as some of gravity's potential energy is consumed in overcoming frictional resistance.

This explains the phenomena of "terminal velocity". The free-fall equations predict that a falling object's velocity will continue to increase without limit. But in air, once a falling object reaches a certain speed, its propensity to fall will be matched by the air's resistance to the fall. At that point the object will continue to fall, but its speed will no longer increase over time. Another way of looking at it is this: gravity's incessant force produces a downward acceleration, but friction with the air creates an upward force and thus an upward acceleration. When falling at terminal velocity, the acceleration downward equals the acceleration upward, they cancel each other out, and a constant downward velocity is maintained. Thus the parachute, with its high air friction resistance, allows the person attached to it to float to earth unharmed.

A Quick Recap:

Earth's gravity causes objects to fall, and they fall according to precise physical equations. The equations assume no air or other resistance. Any resistance at all will cause the object to fall less rapidly than it would without that resistance. If a falling object is affected by air resistance it falls slower than it would if free-falling, and it will take longer to fall a given distance.

Free-fall From WTC Building Heights:

The towers were 1350 and 1360 feet tall; average = 1355 feet. Let's start by using our free-fall equation to see how long it should take an object to free-fall from the towers' height.

Distance = 1/2 x Gravity x Time squared. (D = 1/2 x G x T x T)

With a little basic algebra, we solve the equation for the fall time, T:

2 x Distance = Gravity x Time(squared) (2 x D = G x T x T)

Time squared = (2 x Distance) / Gravity (T x T = 2 x D / G)

Time squared = 2 x 1355 / 32 = 84.7 (T = square root of (2 x D / G))

Time = 9.2

So our equation tells us that it takes 9.2 seconds to free-fall to the ground from the height of the WTC towers.

Using our simpler equation, V = G x T, we can see that at 9.2 seconds, the free-falling object's velocity must be about 295 ft/sec, which is just over 200 mph.

But that can only occur IN A VACUUM.

Since the WTC was in Earth's atmosphere at sea level, you might be able to imagine how much air resistance that represents. Think about putting your arm out the window of a car moving even half that fast! Most free-falling objects reach their terminal velocity long before they reach 200 mph. For example, the terminal velocity of a free-falling human body is around 120 mph. The terminal velocity of a free-falling cat is around 60 mph.

Therefore, it is clear that air resistance alone will make it take longer than 9.2 seconds for anything falling from the towers' height to reach the ground.

Observations from 9/11:

On page 305 of the 9/11 Commission Report, we are told, in the government's "complete and final report" on 9/11, that the South Tower collapsed in 10 seconds. Here is the exact quote:

"At 9:58:59, the South Tower collapsed in ten seconds". That's the government's official number. With all the videos that show it, they could not lie about this.

But as we've determined above, the FREE-FALL TIME IN A VACUUM is 9.2 seconds, and 10 seconds is an exceptionally short fall time through the air.

This "collapse" was not without far more physical resistance than from the air alone. It proceeded through all the lower stories of the tower. Those undamaged floors below the plane impact zone offered resistance thousands of times greater than that of air. Those lower stories, and the central steel core columns, had successfully supported the mass of the tower for 30 years despite hurricane-force winds and tremors. Air cannot do that.

Can anyone possibly imagine undamaged lower floors getting out of the way of the upper floors as gracefully and relatively frictionlessly as air would? Can anyone possibly imagine the lower stories slowing the fall of the upper floors less than would, say, a parachute?

It is beyond the scope of the simple but uncontested physics here to tell you how long such a collapse should have taken. Would it have taken a minute? Ten minutes? Hard to say, but certainly it would take far more than 10 seconds!

What is certain, beyond any shadow of a doubt, is that the towers could not have collapsed gravitationally, through their intact lower stories, as rapidly as was observed on 9/11. Not even close. This is shown above to be physically impossible!

Not only was tremendous energy expended in causing the observed massive high-speed sideways debris ejections, but virtually all the concrete and glass of the tower was pulverized - actually dissociated is a better word. Never mind what happened to all the supporting steel core columns! The energy requirements to do anything like that, alone, rival the total amount of potential energy that the entire tower had to give. Gravity alone is sufficient to cause some things to fall that far, even through air, in close to the observed 10 second collapse time. But that is without the huge expenditure of energy necessary to pulverize all of that concrete and glass, eject debris, plus cause the steel core columns to effectively disappear. The gravitational potential energy present was certainly not enough to have done all these things at once.

Energy can neither be created nor destroyed; it only changes form. So WHERE DID ALL THAT ADDITIONAL DESTRUCTIVE ENERGY COME FROM?

Conclusions:

In order for the towers to have collapsed "gravitationally" in the observed duration, as we've been told over and over again, one or more of the following zany-sounding conditions must have been met:

* The undamaged structure below the impact zone offered zero resistance to the collapse.

* The glass and concrete spontaneously disintegrated without any expenditure of energy.

* The massive vertical steel core columns simply vanished, as if by magic.

* On 9/11 alone, in that location alone, gravity was much stronger than gravity.

* On 9/11 alone, in that location alone, energy was not conserved.

None of these laws-of-physics-violating, and thus impossible, conditions can be accounted for by the official government theory of 9/11, nor by any of the subsequent analyses and arguments designed to prop up this official myth of 9/11.

The Bottom Line:

The government explanations for the WTC collapses fail the most basic conservation-of-energy reality check. Therefore the government theory is FALSE; it does not fit the observed facts, and the notion of a "pancake collapse" cannot account for what happened. The "pancake collapse" explanation is impossible, and thus absurd. It is A LIE.

It is utterly impossible for a gravitational collapse to proceed so destructively through a path of such great resistance in anywhere near free-fall time. This fact debunks the preposterous contention that the WTC collapses can be blamed solely upon damage resulting from the plane impacts. The unnaturally short durations of the top-down collapses reveal that the towers did not disintegrate because they were coming down, but rather they came down because something else was causing them to disintegrate.

So, to the extent that people accept the ridiculous "pancake collapse" story, former CIA Director and current Secretary of Defense Gates' other premise, that people know what they saw, is also false. It is left to you to decide if his conclusion, which was based upon clearly incorrect presumptions, is also flawed.

The collapse of WTC building 7, which was NOT hit by any plane, and which also collapsed within a second of free-fall time later that same day, similarly fails the conservation-of-energy analysis. The 9/11 Commission made no attempt to explain it.

Just how and why so many highly-accredited and credentialed people all so miserably failed to check the "pancake collapse" theory, by giving it this basic physics reality check, is beyond the scope of this analysis.

Good that they corrected it before deliveries started. I think Universal has the same language on their site. I would forgo DSP for fine tuning and true USB/LSB rather than a tunable bfo.

Some of the PPM studies are interesting. # 1 Urban stations are now # 17 with PPM. Aribtron is still struggling with landing enough samplings even with PPM. More people are listening with PPM cume is up!

In Jacksonville, market 47 with a million people surveys are based on 535 in tab. last 4 books it was trending down. Fewer and fewer women are willing to take the survey too. PPM should help with these issues.. though it may show more people are listening and spending less time with radio. Audience sharing will be up too. interesting times are ahead. Arbitron breaks down audience sharing. Of 100,000 weekly cume almost 95% of my stations audience was being shared with multiple formats. 5000 or so cume listeners were exclusive.
This of course is all based on those stupid diaries!

So tell me, senior executives from, say, Sony, Mitsubishi, Best Buy, etc.: How do you feel about Ibiquity''s lobbyists getting US taxpayers to pick up the tab for many of their transmitter sales? Wouldn''t it be great if your lobbyists could get Congress to mandate that US taxpayers be required to buy your products, too? Do you even slightly care? Plus, people with enough technical savvy to read the specs are insulted by the false claims of 'CD sound quality' or even 'near-CD sound quality'. These are transparent marketing hype, beyond mean puffery. Sorry, but HDRadio has sworn enemies. This goes beyond just business but has political reprecussions for FCC and for Congress. This has the whiff of political scandal - and I'm a rock-ribbed Republican! The Corporation for Public Broadcasting is especially vulnerable. My advice for any businessman is to avoid any association with HDRadio."

Don't assume that people that call you a loon also support what the current administration is doing in our name.

"Why do I bother with these morons? [the Truth Movement] Because they are destroying the movements which some of us have spent a long time trying to build. Those of us who believe that the crucial global issues - climate change, the Iraq war, nuclear proliferation, inequality - are insufficiently debated in parliament or congress; that corporate power stands too heavily on democracy; that war criminals, cheats and liars are not being held to account, have invested our efforts in movements outside the mainstream political process. These, we are now discovering, are peculiarly susceptible to this epidemic of gibberish.

The obvious corollorary to the belief that the Bush administration is all-powerful is that the rest of us are completely powerless. In fact it seems to me that the purpose of the "9/11 truth movement" is to be powerless. The omnipotence of the Bush regime is the coward's fantasy, an excuse for inaction used by those who don't have the stomach to engage in real political fights."

1107. "Black Friday for HD Radio"

"Black Friday for HD Radio"

This week's Convergence conference in San Jose was a terrific gathering of broadcasters and their partners who feel radio's best days might very well lay ahead. No sticks in the mud, these. Rather, folks with brains and vision and a plan, or at least the hopes of developing one.

This was no place for spin doctors and conventional wisdom. So I was not surprised when Kurt Hanson spoke on radio's future with an emphasis on radio's inevitable future on the Internet.

Nor was I surprised when Kurt veered left to discuss - and dismiss - HD Radio.

What fascinated me was the reaction.

Any room full of broadcasters is full of HD radio doubters, nowadays. But the vibe in this room was remarkable for the eye-rolling and audible snickering that greeted virtually any mention of HD.

Kurt disassembled HD's premise by dividing the total number of radios now in circulation by the markets in which those radios live and other relevant assumptions (I did something like this a while back myself). He arrived at the conclusion that the average HD radio advertiser in any given market could reach more prospects by standing at the bottom of their driveway and handing out fliers.

In a panel session immediately following Kurt's, the lone iBiquity spokesman filibustered on his talking points, spitting one after the next, but the effort seemed surprisingly desperate. You could almost hear the sweat forming on his brow as he reiterated his case, oblivious to the thrashing that had just occurred.

Although he described himself as Kurt Hanson's "evil twin," the feeling in the room was that he was at least half right.

It left me feeling that a corner had been turned. That broadcasters understood new media presented scores of new opportunities, few of which had anything to do with selling newfangled radios to consumers who don't want or need them.

This should create great hope for those of us in radio: Hope that good ideas really will rise to the top. Hope that we're too smart to be taken in by pyramid schemes. Hope that those with a vested interest will be revealed for what they are. Hope that those with the interests of broadcasters and listeners and clients at heart will create the kind of future those constituencies demand and deserve.

All along, HD radio was designed as the industry's counterpunch to XM and Sirius. As the satellite titans near a merger (which I do believe will happen and could come any day now) in order to save themselves, as satellite's control over one pocket in the dashboard accelerates, as another pocket opens up for all-things-Internet, HD radio will rapidly dim into obsolescence like the technological also-rans which preceded it.

All technology is transitional, but some never make it to the transition.

In this new media world, opportunities are actually less about "convergence" than about emergence. Chaotic storms of passion bring audiences together. Their whims and tools and discussions allow them to take the driver's seat. We are and always will be in service to them.

HD radio was always about what the industry wants, not about what consumers want. That's why it was doomed to fail from the start.

And, unless there's some remarkable consolation prize embedded into the satellite radio merger decision, that day shall be Black Friday for HD radio.

I can tell you that a transmitter in digital mode needs more headroom than analog needs. Digital mode peak power requirements are steep.
Chance are the modules are being driven past their ratings and fail for that reason after a while.

Criminal records now available for public access

By Michael Smith

NEW YORK (AP) - Criminal records, once previously available only to police and federal law enforcement, are now available to the general public.

Bankruptcy records, DMV records, lost relatives, and various other civil records have been made available to the public through the Freedom of Information Act and the Patriot Act. People from all over America are now using http://agentb.records4.hop.clickbank.net/ to view information on potential employees, friends, and lovers.

"I never thought I would find information like this!" says Julia Lee, who recently used the website to find out private information on a potential business partner. "He was seriously in debt, and had pending criminal charges!" she said.

Christopher Jones, of the Institute for Access to Information said this opens up a whole new world to private citizens. "Previously, you never had the ability to find out this kind of information."

"Now, anyone will have the ability to get any kind of records they want, on almost any individual."

The CC+ and Sony 2010 are about at tie at the top when it comes to portable MW performance. The GE Superadio 2 is also a good one but analog only. The Superadio 3 is not quite as good as the two and quality varies from unit to unit. The CC radio with shortwave included is also a good MW performer since it has the dual ferrite antenna built into it.

One of my current favorites is the Tecsun R-333 which you can only buy out of China and the controls are all in Chinese although they are pretty easy to figure out. It is digital and does an nice job on MW.

I ordered a wi fi wireless internet radio and am now looking for a single wireless earbud to wear when I go to sleep. Is there such a two part unit that could be plugged into the speakerphone outlet on the radio and transmit to the wireless earbud.

What About - Listening to the Radio While You Sleep ?
- What Are Your Listening Options ?

Malibu Ron,

One option would be to buy a low cost BlueTooth Transmitter like the "Jabra A210 BlueTooth Transmitter" or Jabra A120s Bluetooth Music Adaptor and use it with any BlueTooth EarBud or BlueTooth EarPhones of your choice.

Jabra A210 BlueTooth Transmitter

ABOUT - BlueTooth Technology - FAQs
http://www.mobileinfo.com/Bluetooth/FAQ.htm

FWIW - Most High Quality Single-Ear EarBuds are {can be} very Expensive -example- Sennheiser "Wireless" Earbuds

http://www.sennheiserusa.com/newsite/productdetail.asp?transid=502494

WHAT ABOUT ? - The Over-Night EarBud OUCH !
Having an EarBud in your Ear all-night-long might turn into a pain-in-the-rear - ouch !

Here is an 'alternative' to EarBud and Earphones that does not require placing anything on or in your body {head}.

I use the ICOM R75 and the Drake R8B. No mediumwave penetrates my Great Read.. about HD and radio's problems

Is HD The Answer To Radio's Youth Listening Exodus?

By Keith Berman; photo by Scott Kirkland/Retna Ltd. With radio persistently losing listeners to other media sources like iPods, the Internet and somewhere around 10,000 cable TV channels, HD radio is aiming to serve as a draw to bring younger listeners back to the terrestrial airwaves. But detractors warn that the additional digital channels offered by HD technology could only further fracture an already scattered audience. In any case, the latest progress report on the potential of HD radio reveals some serious vulnerabilities—despite radio programmers' best intentions to utilize those new channels to attract the masses, of all ages. At R&R's "Keeping Radio Relevant for Tomorrow's Listeners" round-table discussion held Aug. 17 in Los Angeles, participant Larry Rosin (pictured), co-founder/president of Edison Media Research, admitted, "I did a study on HD radio, and the women were laughing. They were literally mocking the commercials." Jacobs Media senior consultant Dave Beasing concurred that current promotional campaigns aren't exactly turning the tide: "I find increasing awareness of HD because of the promos, but low intent to purchase." Indeed, marketing might be called into question, with many studies showing that the general populace still doesn't know what HD radio is—and even worse, many in the industry telling stories of attempting to buy HD radios from electronics dealers whose salespeople have no clue what the product is. Another issue: Once a consumer finds someone selling an HD radio, installing it and getting it to work can be just as difficult.
Spanish Broadcasting System VP of programming Pio Ferro told his own story of trying to buy an HD radio for his car and having to jump through numerous hoops to get the proper equipment. "We've been running HD on [Latin pop] WRMA [Romantica] in Miami since the capability was there," he said. "When it came in, it sounded phenomenal." However, getting a consistent signal proved to be an irritating challenge. Even so, HD has become a priority for SBS. "The marketing message of 'stations between the stations' is difficult," Ferro said. "It's hard enough to get people to write down 96.3—but hopefully [the Portable People Meter] will make that easier." Rosin also had difficulties with HD. "I can receive one HD station in the New York metro, a Christian station from New Jersey that I didn't know existed until I got an HD radio," he said. Broadening that landscape to the industry as a whole, Rosin revealed that last year at the NAB Radio Show, he went to the HD radio Web site and counted the formats available. "As of last September, it was clear the programmers of America considered the killer app to be classic country: It was the most-programmed format. But I'm skeptical that classic country is what's going to drive people to Best Buy and Circuit City and say they need HD radio," he said. Rosin's point: If you're not programming formats targeted at listeners under 30, how can you appeal to them and get them to listen? "I've long said HD shouldn't be trusted to anyone over 30," he said. "It could potentially foment the revolution that FM was in the '60s and '70s. Kids will come up with ideas that none of us are capable of, and it will create incredible programming that will drive sales." I'm hoping someone can save me time and money by selling me their used one.

By the way, I've seen a couple being auctioned at crazy prices the last couple of weeks. I can't imagine how the price got up to $45 plus shipping on the same radio we can get for $43 total from the above seller.

However, in todays modern jargon "Black Friday"

So to me a "Black Friday for HD-Radio" is 'Good News'

Let me get this straight. You are asking someone to sell their RP300 radio to you at less than market price?? And a crazy price according to you is the one determined by the market. C'mon...try trolling elsewhere.

Wasn't trolling honest. I want a deal on a used > new rp300. And truthfully do not understand the $55 total for the eBay auction on a radio selling elsewhere for $45.

Greetings to my friends at RRS.

I am working on a new pc board. I actually have gone out for boards and got them working, but I've had to rethink one of the circuits.

In a nutshell the board is a result of the work published by Dallas Lankford on his investigations into audio elliptic filters. Mr Lankford uses these filters to reduce the distortion resulting from fading - fading distortion. Terry had brought up the paper here a while back and it's taken me a long while to do anything with it.

The board has a MC1350 Gain Controlled IF Amplifier followed by a precision detector, tone control, audio amplifier, elliptic filter, and a final amplifier to drive a speaker. There is also a dedicated amplifier to provide some type of AGC action. I'm not quite sure of the requirements necessary in order to provide a decent AGC. I'm just trying to smooth out the audio fading some. My plan was to just put a low pass filter with a cut-off frequency of a couple of hertz to modulate the MC1350 amplifier. I intend to drive this thing with my Red Sun RP2100 radio.

My friend pointed out that the noise would be amplified as well so that I would need to devise a circuit that would not respond to anything under a few uV. My answer is to have a switch and switch in the agc when I got the station half-ass tuned in - HATI. Circuit has a lot of hooks and empty board space so I can jam a little bit of stuff in there to accomplish a basic agc. I've run through the rest of the board and all of the other circuits are good to go.

So the point here is that I'm in a little bit over my head. I would like to have some discussion with you brainiacs about AGC and maybe some links to circuits or comments on radios that have had good agc action. If you think I'm pissing in the wind with an audio controlled AGC circuit then I would like to hear that as well.

regards,
Bob

Burr,

The problem is, some of the radio/antenna answers, while they sound good, are also technically wrong or just plain BS.

The latest 2008 post production manual and brochure versions for the Icom IC-7700 can be found at:
brochure
http://www.icomcanada.com/products/amateur/7700/IC-7700.pdf manual

http://www.icom.co.jp/manual/external/transceivers/IC-7700.pdf
SW4ever said the manual was 150 pages -> no it's not, it is actually 216 pages.

Also a very nice 15 minute video:
http://www.icom.co.jp:80/world/topics/ic-7700movie/index.html

As to the sensitivity specs, both documents list Icom's figures for the radio on the MW band as:
AM 6.3 uV
SSB 0.5 uV
both with preamp 1 ON.

Since I only DX on MW in SSB this is more than adequate.
Based on my experience with the IC-756PROIII the preamp 1 is supremely quiet and can be used for very faint DX. I expect the 7700 to be even better. OTOH my old Drake R8B had a preamp that was so noisy it was quite useless on MW
DX, so I never switched it on (far too noisy).

It is also true that the noise floor on the MW band is usually quite high, even on a quiet winters night here it exceeds S1, but before sunset
and after sunrise that is a different matter altogether, as at our prime DX sites the atmospherics fall away completely and it is possible to get recordable DX with the "S" meter on zero and not even flicking. Here a sensitivity of 0.5 uV is vital for good DX on the MW band for those rare faint signals.

Pete says his R75 is not too good on audio sound, and indeed it is true that the older Icom radio's were not known for good audio quality. but the latest offerings like my Icom IC-756PROIII has superb sound, possibly even better than my R8B and as good as a AOR7030.

Then there is the question of what will a 7700 get in rare DX that an R8B
won't? The answer is as little as only 1 out of 100 signals, but that 1% is vital to a fella like me who has been DXing for over 40 years. If I get one more signal like my last CFUN Vancouver Canada, over 10,000miles/16,000 km's away on MW, then the purchase is justified. However, it is also about how you get there, and the 7700 has features that make it exceedingly easy
and convenient, like the difference between driving a budget auto or a top of the line Caddie.

Then there is also the question of what ahole would spend $6300 on such a high priced radio. Well there are those who have the money and simply want the best, like a South African who has both an Icom IC-7800 AND a Icom
IC-R9500, and old fart's like me who really don't have the money, but also want the best. In my case I decided to spend the children's inheritance - what the hell, they don't really need it.

Lastly I am still waiting with foetid breath for mine. It is now being listed as exstock in America and Europe but my dealer says the Icom IC-7700 is "in transit on the way", However Icom Japan have issued a delivery embargo that the radio must not be delivered to customers yet, indicating that there is some sort of problem to be resolved before delivery.

Oh don't get me wrong.. I think HD is a joke! And is not radio's future. I'd bet on content before HD!
Erosion of 18-34's is directly related to content and how the user chooses to seek entertainment or enjoy music. I'm sorry, more of the same, but better quality isn't goint to fix the problem.

Back in the 90s, I designed a receiver that used a pair of 1350s in the I.F. strip. I could not find a suitable AGC circuit, so I designed my own.
A 160 millisecond time constant is low enough for your low-pass filter. This will prevent bass guitar frequencies from modulating the AGC bus. Next, make sure that you use filtering ahead of your first I.F. amplifier....if you don't, you will not only have broadband noise from your I.F. strip, but strong out of bandpass signals will capture you AGC system.
The manifestation will occur by having strong stations as far as 100kHz away causing desense of your receiver.
I actually perfected this complicated design........then, I discovered the Philips TDA1572. This chip offers a much better solution, since it has on-board AGC, low distortion demodulator, etc. The AOR7030 uses this chip as the 2nd I.F./AGC/demodulator. If you have ever listened to one of these receivers, you will have an idea of the capability of this chip.
The only difficult thing about the 1572 is that it is almost impossible to get a fundamental crystal to oscillate on the proper frequency when using the on-board oscillator. The oscillator is great for a conventional LC oscillator, since this chip was really designed to be used as an AM radio on a chip. Another nice thing is the buffered 50 Ohm I.F. output, which you can use to drive a sync detector, product detector, etc.
E-mail me directly, and I will be glad to send you design information for both of these chips. I've been meaning to get my website up again, and repost these designs, but that won't be for awhile. Have fun.....that is the best part of homebrewing!

Pete

Screw Bush and the Bush administration.
Screw the "Truth Movement".
Liars, all of them.

"Why do I bother with these morons? [the Truth Movement] Because they are destroying the movements which some of us have spent a long time trying to build. Those of us who believe that the crucial global issues - climate change, the Iraq war, nuclear proliferation, inequality - are insufficiently debated in parliament or congress; that corporate power stands too heavily on democracy; that war criminals, cheats and liars are not being held
to account, have invested our efforts in movements outside the mainstream political process. These, we are now discovering, are peculiarly susceptible to this epidemic of gibberish.

The obvious corollorary to the belief that the Bush administration
is all-powerful is that the rest of us are completely powerless. In fact it seems to me that the purpose of the "9/11 truth movement" is to be powerless. The omnipotence of the Bush regime is the coward's fantasy, an excuse for inaction used by those who don't have the stomach to engage in real political fights."

Could be Joe,
We all have our idea of what works best and why. That's the fun of DXing.

I try using some of the things said but I only trust a few people on this list and only open post from a few people on the list.

I have posted my ideas that work for me on power and grounding and have "never had a reply comment post so I ass-u-me people don't like my idea but it works very well for me and I'm as happy as can be.
I offered my idea and it's up to others to want to try it
Some people do post pure BS just to see if they can mess someone up.
I take the radio as is and make the best of it, power and grounding are a big part.

Seems to me I remember some station (I thought it was NSS, but histories suggest I was mistaken) used to transmit AP and UPI news stories via Morse, making for good practice and easy verification of accurate copy. I used to really surprise my dad, a news junkie, by coming up with stories that he hadn't heard yet but would hear in an hour or two.

Icom sensitivity specs have always been conservative, to say the least, so the figure 6.3uV AM < 1.8 is probably wrong. My guess is that the new Icoms do not have attenuation below 1.8 MHz (the IC-7000 for one has not, although specs say it has. I have been told that this is the case for the IC-7800 as well). So your IC-7700 is probably better than 1uV on AM < 1.8. Using SSB sensitivity figures when DX-ing AM stations in ECSS (SSB) mode does not make sense. It is still an AM signal.

John, I seriously doubt that you will hear a station with the IC-7700 that you can't hear with the 756Pro III. If your aim really is to hear more stations, you need to reconsider your attitude towards SDRs. Admittedly they do not yet quite match the quality of an excellent-level "traditional" receiver/transceiver but as you know they have other qualities.

Telamon,

Yes I am simply a Practical "User" of Shortwave Radios and Shortwave Radio Antennas -aka- a Shortwave Listener (SWL).

-ps- All I have Ever claimed is to be a Radio Listener.
--pps-- I am not a "Techie". {Theory Ain't My Thing.}

For the Practical "User" of a Device {that would be about 80%~90% of the Users : Theory {Detailed Knowledge} is NOT Required.

The "User" simply Wants and Needs the "How To" practical things to do which are tried and proven; and Work [.]

Example : Turn the Key - Start the Car.
[Automotive Electrical Theory is Not Required.]

Example : Learn to Drive Car - Take Driving Test.
[Automotive Design & Engineering Theory is Not Required.]

Example : RadioShack sold a Million or more of their RadioShack 125' Shortwave Radio Antenna Kits RadioShack Catalog # 278-758
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ220210467775
[Its a Practical "How To" KIT - No Theory Required.]

Wake-Up Call Telamon - About Half (50%) of the "Users" do not even what to Build their own simple Wire Antennas; and simply want to Buy a Ready-Made Shortwave Antenna.

NO THEORY IS REQUIRED - Simply Tell Them :
* What's Out There To Buy {Usually Three-or-More Items}
* Where To Buy {Usually Three-or-More Links/URLs}
* Make a Few Personal Recommendations.
Basically -if- the Question is What-to-Buy : That is the Answer.
-Again- No Theory is Required.

Telamon - All I do is offer {post} Practical "How To" Advise with Links for Newbies to Read and Do [No Theory Required.]

TELAMON - Be My Guest to Post Before Me or After Me and Give the Newbies all the Theory that they can handle; and that you can provide.
-but- Please Talk-To {Talk-With} the Newbies
-and- Not Down-To the Newbies.

Telamon - Back-to-the-Challenge : This Challenge is for 'You' to Answer the Questions Posted by Newbies.
{Not Any Questions Posted By Me "RHF"}
Alas you have shown you True Intent which is :
* Not to Clean-Up the Rec.Radio.Shortwave Newsgroup and make it Better.
* But to try an Force Me from this Newsgroup and Let You and a few 'techies' Dominate It.
* Others Might Ask : After RHF then Who is Next . . .
Are 'They' Themselves on Telamon's List ?

What You Call "BS" is simply Practical Advice : Which is usually "How To" or "What To Buy" which are the two things that most Newbies here at the Rec.Radio.Shortwave Newsgroup Ask. [MEANING : NO THEORY REQUIRED]

Telamon - Honestly I Do Not Remember a Newbie Asking :
"Can You Explain the Theory of . . . "
